for resumption of their offensive the Germans have concentrated 149 of their best divisions between the North sea and the Oise. These comprise two-thirds of their entire army and tetal in round numbers 1,680,600 men, including 1,129,000 infantrymen.

This mass, which includes all the divisions the Germans were able to reorganize and reform after their March offensive, is divided into five zereat armies as follows:

The fourth army, comprising seven divisions (84,000 men), between the North sea and Ypres, commanded by von Arnim; the sixth army, number-teenth army, between Givenchy commanded by von Quast; the seventeenth army, between Givenchy and Moreuil, commanded by von Buelow; the second army, between Bucquoy and Moreuil and Noyon, commanded by von Mutier.

Big Reserves Behind Line.

The last three armies, comprising forty-eight divisions (576,000 men) make a total of eighty-two divisions (984,000 men) in the front line between the sea and the Oise. Fifty-eight divisions (696,000 men) are stationed in reserve behind these for the purpose of feeding the attack—when once launched—and filling up the losses.

There is every indication that the coming resumption of the offensive will have the same objectives as the first—to threaten Amiens; to cut the Amiens Clermont railway; to force the evacuation of the Ypres salient and to separate the main British and French armies, thus forceing an evacuation of reparate the main process of the forcing an evacuation of the forcing an evacuation of the stablishment of a new line from the mouth of the Somme to Noyon, by way of Montdidier.

Lack of fighting spirit in the crack German divisions, it is reported is holding back a renewal of the heavy battles. Most of the first class units were battered severely in the fighting of the last two months and require more rest before they can again take up active operations.

Indications are that the Germans may extend the fighting front further south and east along the Aisne (Continued on Page Two.)

provision, whereby gamblers,

On motion of Mayor House, who originated the idea of such a law here, the city commissioners today instructed George P. Hayden, city attorney, to draft the ordinance. Following the commission's action Hayden said he had the outline of the ordinance formulated.

formulated.

Hayden, in his outline, will include all persons arrested on the aforementioned charges, as well as men found in houses of immorality, under a general heading of vagrancy. The ordinance provides that when convictions of ance provides that when convictions of vagrancy are obtained by the city the police judge will have power to assess a fine of from $50 to $500 or a jail sentence of from 30 days to six months, or both. The police judge would then be empowered to decree that the person or persons convicted serve out the sentence at useful labor on the streets or in the city parks. It Will Be Drastic.

The ordinance, as outlined by Hay-den, will probably be the most drastic den, will probably be the most drastic "antivag" or anti-nuisance city law ever passed in Kansas, or the majority of other states. It will be far more drastic than the state law providing for the punishment of able-bodied men who fail or refuse to work. The state law provides only a fine or jail sentence, and has no provision to put the prisoners to work. Under the city ordinance, those convicted will be put to work at a useful occupation and be made to pay the expense with labor of their punishment for failing to get a job sooner.

It also appears that the new city law will be one of the most popular of any on the city statutes. This morning Mayor House received a letter from Samuel E. Lux, of the Lux commission house here, congratulating him for his stitude in proposity the mission house here, congratulating him for his attitude in proposing the

Many Will Not Work.

Many Will Not Work.

"There are several men down here in the bottoms," said Lux, "who will not work other than long enough to get a half dollar. They are mostly negroes. Today we are unloading a car of foodstuffs. There are several men loitering around in front of a restaurant nearby and we can't hire one of them to turn their hands."

While the new law will be primarily to compel men to engage in a useful occupation or get into the army or navy, there will be no provision referring to military service. It will be drawn in such a manner that its meaning will be plain "between lines." The commissioners, in interest the wides to draw the ordinary of the commissioners, in interest the wides to draw the ordinary of the commissioners are unloading as the last series of the logical transfer of the commissioners are unloaded. Each state has received two pounds of wool from the White House sheep herd. Each state will conduct an auction similar to the one in Kansas. Bids will be sent to the governor by mail, telephone or telegraph, or bidders may submit their offers personally. The person who places the highest bid will receive the package of wool, which is being sent to Topeka by President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson for the Red Cross campaign. Bids are solicited from every section of the state and from former Kansans in other states.

The package of wool was clipped from the sheep which graze on the White House lawn in Washington. A telegram asking Governor Capper to conduct the auction for the sale of the wool has useen received from H. P. Davidson, chairman of the American Red Cross war council.
